TAKING COURSES IN HAPPINESS

People may pursue happiness differently. They certainly require different elements to achieve it and surely have different rates of success in their pursuit of it. Therefore, it is conceivable that some people find college helpful in their pursuit of happiness. After all, college is replete with a great many elements related to happiness.

Realizing that the relationships that give happiness are complex, the college can provide no simple formula for producing happiness. However, the college can suggest that one take courses in happiness. Which courses are the courses in happiness? Again, that varies with each student. For example, observation tells us that not everyone who is happy is smiling or laughing; not everyone who is unhappy is crying or scowling. Ultimately, it matters less what one takes in college than the amount of positive energy one puts into it. The result usually has been a transformation. . . a revitalization. . . a positive sense of happiness.

This Historical Record of the 1985-86 school year reflects the college community's pursuit of happiness. Both the formal and informal curriculum was filled with courses that brought happiness to various elements of the college community.

May this pictorial review of West Virginia State College's constant and dynamic quest for happiness in 1985-86 be a course in happiness for you.

by Rachel Campbell-Muhammad, editor

"WVSC students are part of the privileged citizens of the world," according to George H. Hanford, president of the College Entrance Board.

Hanford was the guest speaker at the fall convocation held in Ferrell Auditorium on Sept. 18.

Hanford's topic was the relevance of higher education in the world today.

As he put it, "Education is man's best hope for peace in the world."

He talked of his travels and how seeing familiar problems in unfamiliar settings has helped him grapple with the problems surrounding education in America.

"Urbanization is not peculiarly an American problem." He cited as an example, that Bangkok and Singapore are facing similar problems in making educational changes that will reflect the changing lifestyle of the country.

Hanford perceives the world as becoming more integrated.

"Isolationism does not make sense. There is a growing interdependence between the nation's of the world. We must strike a balance between the first, second and third worlds, so they will eventually become one," he said.

Hanford said that the world is on the brink of nuclear holocaust, and that man is destroying his environment, committing in effect ecological suicide.

Discussing world hunger, Hanford said that 35,000 children die every day from hunger. He then asked what quality of life could they expect if they lived?

"Hunger is one problem among many that must be solved to guarantee the lives of millions.

"If the world's problems were simple we'd have solved them."

He maintained that a balance could be found, but that solutions will require the best minds man has to offer.

"Minds are bettered by education, especially higher education. There is an explicit recognition of the need for higher education."

In his address Hanford commented on the responsibilities inherent in higher education.

"Students are citizens of the world," he said.

"The world's population is approximately 4.6 billion. Fifty million are getting a college education, that is about 1 percent. The responsibility is awesome in terms of the world's problems," he added.

"This may sound like high-flown rhetoric, but it isn't. Our nation has been able to grow because of its investment in education."

Hanford said that it was up to students, those blessed by the opportunity of higher education, and those in following generations, to make a success of the world.

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Fool For Love is the second Sam Shepard play produced here at West Virginia State College. The first, Buried Child was presented in 1980, one year after it won the Pulitzer Prize for drama. Like Buried Child, WVSC's production of Fool For Love is a West Virginia premiere.

In the past five years, Shepard has taken his place at the forefront of American dramatists. His plays are being produced by regional theatres all over the country. (Fool For Love will be presented by over 20 theatres throughout the U.S. this season.) Shepard's play, True West was recently filmed (starring John Malkovich) and shown on the Public Broadcasting System. During September of this year, there were five Shepard plays in production off-Broadway in New York City, including Fool For Love, which ran for two years and won an Obie award for Best Play. The New York Daily News called it "Sam Shepard's purest and most beautiful play." The New Yorker magazine called it, "... mysterious and unsettling ... and as funny as anything he has ever done." Fool For Love is currently being made into a full length feature film, starring Shepard and Kim Basinger, directed by Robert Altman.

Although theatre buffs have long regarded Shepard as America's finest playwright, he has now achieved star status as a film actor. Since his first screen appearance in Days of Heaven, Shepard has garnered critical acclaim for his performances in Resurrection, Raggedy Man, Frances, and Country and earned an Oscar nomination for his portrayal of West Virginia native Chuck Yeager in The Right Stuff.

Shepard's plays are not realistic in a conventional sense. As critic Ross Wetzsteon describes, "time is immediate rather than sequential, narrative is a matter of consciousness rather than behavior, and character is spontaneous rather than coherent." Using rock and roll street language (Shepard used to be a drummer for the Holy Modal Rounders, which toured the U.S. along with the Rolling Stones in the 60's) and emotionally vivid images, Shepard consistently manages to create powerful theatrical masterpieces. Fool For Love is the first play in which Shepard examines the sexual and emotional connection between men and women. It is a violent play; a world of ruthless futility, claustrophobia, confinement and sexual destiny. We're pleased to present the West Virginia premiere of Fool For Love.

Sioux indians visit

Two native Americans share cultural aspects

Francis Whitebird and Florentine Blue Thunder, members of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe, of South Dakota, appeared on campus to discuss aspects of Native American culture.

Francis Whitebird, coordinator of the department of Indian Affairs for South Dakota and a member of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe, spoke at a convocation in Ferrell Auditorium.

"Problems of Native Americans in Modern Society,"-their life styles, differences in cultural values and religion, are issues that Whitebird addressed.

Whitebird graduated from South Dakota State University in 1965 with a bachelor's degree in agriculture. In 1975 he received a master's degree in education from Harvard. A Vietnam veteran, he completed two tours as a medic.

Whitebird has been elected to the South Dakota Tribal Council twice.

The Tribal Council is similar to the WV State Legislature in that the state legislature and the Tribal Council can only represent residents. The Tribal Council is territorial and makes the laws and establishes the taxes for all the reservations in South Dakota. South Dakota laws and those on the reservations are mutually exclusive.

Whitebird is the longest-ranking member of Tribal Land Enterprise, which manages the one-half million tribal acres in South Dakota.

He stressed the importance of "self-governance and self-determination of the Tribal Council."

Florentine Blue Thunder, also a member of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe, discussed the "Psychology of Herbal Medicine," at a science seminar in the Science Auditorium.

The belief in the healing properties of herbs has been in Blue Thunder's family for generations. He believes that the "ground of Mother Earth can nourish human beings by the herbs she grows just as the breast of Mothers can nurish her infant by the milk she produces. Today, in modern medicine, little natural medicine is used."

When Florentine teaches at St. Francis Indian School, he integrates his Dakota culture with the social sciences. He focuses on how the course of man relates to the stars, plants and animals.

Additionally, Blue Thunder teaches English as a second language to his students who speak the Sioux language at home. When he teaches addition and subtraction, he uses sticks in Indian games.

Blue Thunder has been actively involved in his community for years. Last year he was chairman of his community-similar to a mayor in our culture. He continues to be active in their Indian Club.

For five years, Florentine has participated in the yearly Sun Dance. "The Sun Dance, held in late August, begins at sunrise and ends at sundown, and lasts four days. During these four days, the participants pray continually, maintaing contact with Tunkasila, our equivalent to god, trying to purify themselves mentally, physically, spiritually and socially," says Blue Thunder.

Sun Dances are similar to our Christian Lent.

Blue Thunder also dances and sings at the Pow Wows, which are social gatherings to honor someone on their birthday, anniversary, for the birth of a baby, or at rallies.

At age 26, Blue Thunder attributes his interest in herbal medicine to his grandmother, Kate Fast Dog and his grandfather, Dave Blue Thunder, who was a medicine man for 30 years.

Indian series ended by Lakota woman

C O N V O C A T I O N

11:00 A. M.

Monday, November 18, 1985

by Rachel Campbell-
Muhammad, editor

Patricia Locke, a Lakota Indian, ended the series of seminars on "The Native American; His Arts, His Culture and His History," Nov. 18.

The series was held during the month of November on campus.

Florentine Blue Thunder opened the program with a talk on herbal medicine and its psychology on Nov. 7, followed by a discussion by Professor Beatrice Medicine on "Indian Women: A perspective."

On Nov. 14 a film screening was held, and a concert, with Indian music and dance, featuring Kevin Locke, Patricia Locke's son, was held on Nov. 18 in the Fine Arts Building.

During her talk on "Indian Culture and Education" Locke said that the great diversity among Indian people, with over 500 tribes in the United States, explains the many different aspects of the culture.

The Indian life style is based on a non-hierarchical social structure, Locke explained. Their basic values are generosity, compassion, bravery and respect for the elders. She compared this to what she considered the three basic characteristics or goals of Americans: individualism, greed and materialism.

Locke expressed the view that Americans are guests on this continent or "Turtle Island," and the Indians are the hosts who treat the guests with love and compassion as they do all human beings.

According to Locke, the biggest obstacles between white and Indian relations is the differences of the cultures, and the tragic history between them.

Indians have their own heroes, Locke said, and some legendary Americans are not considered heroes by Native Americans.

"President Abraham Lincoln is thought of in completely negative terms because of his bad attitude towards Indians," she said.

She mentioned the 32 Indians hanged during his presidency.

Locke said that Indians cannot be considered in the same category as other minorities because of the many peace and land treaties signed between the federal government and the Indians. This in spite of the fact that the Federal government has broken every treaty it ever negotiated with the Indians.

The treaty reads. . . "as long as the grass shall grow and the rivers flow, the government must abide by these treaties to provide health, education and social services to the Indians," Locke said.

'Festival Of Brass'

West Virginia State College hosted a "Festival of Brass," that featured a brass choir, trumpet ensemble, horn ensemble, trombone ensemble and tuba-euphonium ensemble, playing music from England, France, Belgium, Italy, Germany, Russia and the United States.

Two soloists from the United States Air Force Band performed in the concert.

Master Sergeant Ronald Blais performed on the trumpet and Master Sergeant Brian Bowman played the euphonium. Blais joined the Air Force Band in 1978 after graduating from the Institute for Advanced Musical Studies in Montreux, Switzerland. Bowman has had a distinguished solo career which includes the first euphonium recital in Carnegie Recital Hall in 1976.

The concert was under the direction of WVSC Music Director Dr. Kent Hall.

RONALD BLAIS

Blais, a trumpet player, joined the U.S. Air Force concert and symphony orchestra in 1978. He graduated from Boston University and the Institute For Advanced Musical Studies in Montreux, Switzerland.

Brian Bowman

Bowman, who plays the euphonium, has appeared as soloist with the University of Michigan Symphony Band, the U.S. Navy Band and the U.S. Air Force Band. He has performed throughout the United States and in Canada, Japan, Mexico and Norway.

MARIAN McPARTLAND

MARIAN McPARTLAND has something for everyone—classic jazz, favorite popular tunes, and the music of Duke Ellington and Alec Wilder—but all with her own special touch. She has a way with a ballad, stating the melody simply, then injecting improvisations which become more complex with each chorus. With a few informal words between tunes, she maintains an easy rapport with her audience, making the room come alive with her music.

exhibit opened at State

An exhibit of historical photographs of Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil rights movement was on display on the West Virginia State College campus in February.

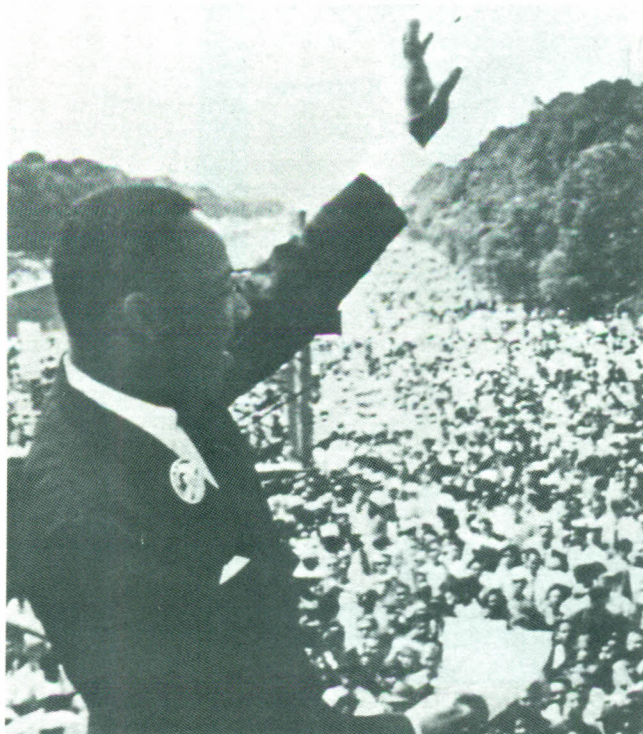

The King exhibit consisted of 65 black-and-white photographs, copies of landmark documents and quotations from King's speeches and writings, all mounted on 10 free-standing panels. Each panel - 20 in all counting both sides - dealt with different aspects of King's life and involvement in the civil rights movement of the 1960's.

Some of the panel titles were "The Montgomery Bus Boycott," "Nonviolent Resistance," "High Court Bans School Segregation," "Birmingham Jail," "The March on Washington," "The Selma March," "Voting for the First Time" and "Free at Last" which depicts King's funeral.

Dr. Ancella Bickley, Vice President for Academic Affairs at State, arranged a program of speakers to open the State exhibit in early February.

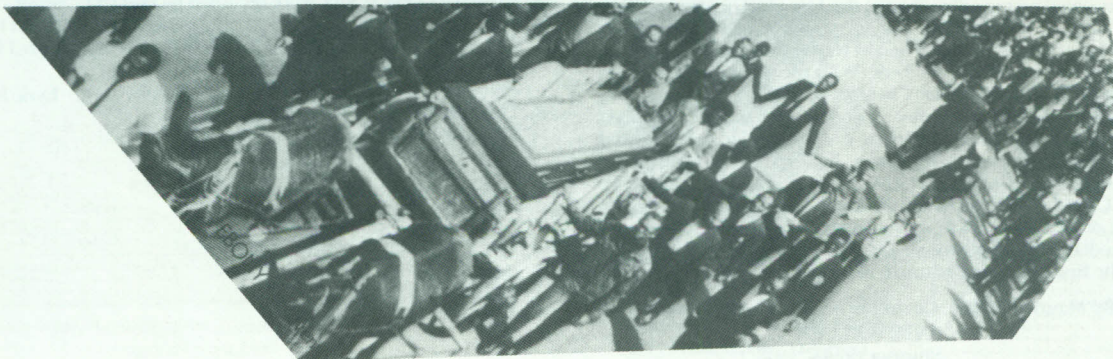

The exhibit will eventually be housed in the Resource Center of the Humanities Foundation, located on the State campus in Institute.

The Fats Waller Musical Show

8:00 p.m.
Tuesday, February 4, 1986
Auditorium
Harrison H. Ferrell Building

Set in a Harlem nightclub of the 1930's and 40's, Ain't Misbehavin' celebrates the music, personality, and high-living style of one of that era's most beloved jazzmen and clowns, Thomas "Fats" Waller.

Fats Waller: My dad, Thomas Waller, was born in Greenwich Village in 1904, and reared in Harlem. His parents were deeply religious; to his father, jazz was the devil's music. Dad studied classical piano and played church organ. He began his professional career as organist at the Lincoln Theatre on 135th Street. In 1920, he met his mentor, the great stride pianist James P. Johnson, and soon became a prized attraction at Harlem rent parties, and one of the most respected musicians in New York. With the success of his songs for the musicals Keep Shufflin' and Hot Chocolates, and a Victor recording contract, the stage was set for Fats Waller. A man of gargantuan appetites, dad's overindulgence in food, liquor and loving is a legend. He never slowed down through all the years of one-night stands, big-time radio, triumphant concert tours of Europe and Hollywood films. He died aboard the Santa Fe Chief near Kansas City in 1943. Dad raised the art of stride piano to its highest level, and was one of the inventors of swing music. He was a prolific composer, a great comedian and a brilliant singer and musician—talents which made him one of the first black superstars in America.

SCLC leader guest speaker

Lowery,

"Whether I'm in the church or pursuing racial justice and world peace, I don't distinguish between them. It's all a part of my ministry."

Lowery talked of his work in the SCLC. "I was elected president in 1977. We're still fighting for human rights. I have been especially involved in the anti-apartheid movement since last year, but have also been involved in economic justice here at home."

"Many blacks have earned the right to check into the Marriott, but many still can't afford to check out."

Lowery said he was glad that the federal government finally decided to make a national holiday for Martin.

"All of us were pleased. However, one of the fears I have about the holiday is that people will stop working on the unfinished task. The legislation is no substitute for the additional issues of economics, justice and peace."

Lowery discussed the progress that blacks have made since the beginning of the civil rights struggle in the 1950's.

"One third of all black families are living in poverty. In 1957, when the SCLC was first organized, blacks made, on average, 57 percent the income of whites. 29 years later, their income is still 57 percent that of whites. Blacks are still the last hired and first fired."

"The dream, in terms of economic justice, is on hold. Even if racism were eliminated, there would still be unemployment. It's the nature of the system. All we want is a certain equity in its distribution."

Dr. Lowery talked about the movement in South Africa.

"I was one of the first five to be arrested in front of the South African Embassy in 1984. As far as a more pragmatic approach, we organized a boycott against Win Dixie, which is a huge marketing chain with over 1,200 outlets. They were selling various products from South Africa, including fish and fruit. We felt that this was an insult to blacks in South Africa, as well as to American farmers. Just before Martin's holiday, they announced that they would stop selling South African products. They also promised to upgrade the status of blacks who work for them."

In 1979, Lowery was the first black delegate to go to the Middle east.

"I'm concerned about Lybia and the United States. We need to take less of a belicose attitude. I regret Mr. Khadafi's beligerence, but he's not the only one who feels that way. When the eagle spreads its wings, the baby eagles don't fly away anymore. We live in a world where most people are non-white and non-Christian.

"I still think we should try non-violence, in regards to the Palestian situation. We think that those struggling for human rights and a homeland will never achieve this with violence."

Black History program graced by trio

Gil Scott-Heron: pieces of the man

by Rachel Campbell-Muhammad, editor

Gil Scott-Heron, poet, philosopher, satirist, graced West Virginia for a second time. This time Scott-Heron and his Trio performed to a packed audience in the Goldston Cafeteria, Feb. 20.

"I was at Marshall before, and I played some gigs like 'Hold On I'm Coming,' 'Ain't Two Proud to Beg,' 'I'm a Soul Man,' and played the piano. They were sure enough Friday night go-for-its. You know, top 40."

Scott-Heron's music is the medium through which his message is heard. He talked about the impact his music has had over the years.

"I no longer feel the same sort of connection that was initially, only established in my mind anyway," said the Chicago native. "What I did and what I presented, black people were not going to allow me to be interpreted to them by white folks, and I blew that."

Scott-Heron mentioned some of the messages he has put out over the years that have in recent history, become reality.

"Later on people are going to come back and talk about Watergate, or Three Mile Island, or Johannesburg, or Ethiopia, or whatever. All the things that we talked about a long time ago. But there's never been any question of credibility or we would never have been able to do it, or keep on doing it."

Scott-Heron says that he still feels the same way about what he's doing. "I feel just as spontaneous and practical as ever. A good idea is a good idea whenever. I think that the thing that we did was, when we said we were committed, we were. And when a lot of other people said they were committed, they weren't. So we embarrassed them. I could stop, but I have more respect for my word than that. If I say I'm down on some sh____ then I'm down on it. And if the sh____ looks bad, it looked bad when I got in it."

In terms of what's happening in South Africa, Scott-Heron sees it as a logical chain reaction, rather than a crisis.

"I see South Africa as a culmination. When the second World War was over, there were only four nations in Africa independent. Now there are only two that aren't. So I see what's happening as a culmination, not as a high point. I just see it as one more that's got to go. It ain't no thing. It's a foregone delusion."

Scott-Heron was playing at State College as part of the school's Black History Month calendar.

He commented that he felt Black History Month was a good idea.

"Why not? We have Saint Patrick's Day, and he never even made it over here."

He commented with an enigmatic smile: "We don't necessarily feel that black people are the hippest people on the planet. But they have that potential, that's why we hang."

Greater Tuna

The West Virginia State College Players presented the comedy, "Greater Tuna," written by Jaston Williams, Joe Sears and Ed Howard.

The play is set in the small town of Tuna, Texas. It involves 18 characters and centers around the murder of the town's judge.

It's a satire on bigotry and prejudice. "It's irreverent humor, that's what it is," said Sterling Spangler, an acting student at West Virginia State College who directed the play.

Melody Ison played Bertha Bumiller, a 50-ish housewife, who's not very smart. She wants to get dangerous books that are harming the minds of the young, off the shelves of the library.

To her those books include "Roots," because it shows only one side of the slavery issue, and "Romeo and Juliet," because it's about teen-agers having sex and who don't respect their elders."

Bertha Bumiller has her share of problems. She has three children, one who has spent a number of years in reform school, and a husband who "runs around on her."

At one point, a reporter from New York interviews Mrs. Bumiller.

During the interview, she tells him about her book-banning efforts. When she tells him about her objections to "Romeo and Juliet," he says, "But don't you know that's Shakespeare? She says, "Didn't he write 'Barefoot in the Park'?"

The reporter tells her he writes for "Intellect" magazine and she says, "Intellect? Well, we don't have that in Tuna." That line may well have been "the crux of the show."

Brown, Townes Homecoming pair

by Jackie Priddy, reporter

This year's Homecoming roles of Mr. and Miss State are being played by Curtis Tyrone Townes of Williamson and Shelia Louise Brown of Institute.

Curtis is a senior majoring in business management. He was a guard on the State Yellow Jacket basketball team in the 1984-85 basketball season, and he was selected to the WVIAC First Team All-Conference.

Curtis said that he felt the competition for Mr. State was strong this year. "I felt very honored because the students did pick me as Mr. State. It does hold a lot of prestige for me."

Miss State is not the first title Sheila has held at State College. A former vice-president of her sophomore class, she was Miss Freshman in '82, Miss ROTC in '84 and Miss Company B in '85. She also holds the distinction of previously being Miss Little West Virginia State in 1971. She has been a member of State's tennis team.

Sheila is a senior majoring in criminal justice, and a member of the Alpha Kappa Sorority.

Shelia thanks all those who voted and campaigned for her. "I could not have done all of the campaigning without everyone's help," she commented.

Jackets give up 450 yards

12-30 Homecoming loss

by Ron Eskins, sports writer

The Yellow Jackets were caught up in the rush of Homecoming, giving up 450 yards on the ground to Fairmont in a 12-30 loss before an estimated 4,600 people at Lakin Field, Oct. 5.

Fairmont running back Demetrius Rush, who went into the game with only 100 yard total in three outings, gained 120 yards and scored two touchdowns, while fellow backs Joe KiKume and Don Smith each rushed for 110 yards. KiKume also scored a touchdown.

The loss was State's third straight, all against West Virginia Conference opponents, and dropped its record to 1-4. Fairmont became 2-2.

HANDICAP IMPACT DAY

HELD AT STATE

May 1 was designated Handicap Impact (HI) Day at West Virginia State College.

Activities held at Wilson College Union included a performance by the College's ROTC Cadet Glee Club and the Singing Hands from the State Vocational Rehabilitation Center.

Other activities included a martial arts demonstration, a remote broadcast by V-100 Radio, display booths, and a picnic lunch which was provided at no cost. Area businesses contributed items for the event.

Previously Handicap Impact Day focused on wheelchair races and similar events, while this year's recognized the many accessibility achievements accomplished by the Access Awareness Council and the State College community.

The Disability Services Unit, an integral part of the WVC Collegiate Support Services and Counseling Center, is located in Room 105, Hill Hall.

The Disabled Student Services Program (DSS) offers the disabled student specialized assistance and resources to enhance the ability of each disabled student to function independently in the educational environment. All students with disabilities, temporary and permanent, that may affect their academic functioning are eligible for DSS services. The goal of the DSS is to incorporate disabled individuals in the mainstream of the college community. DSS offers counseling and advice for students with disabilities.

The DSS Access Awareness Council, chaired by Mr. Wayne Cline, a Senior Social Work Major, functions as the primary advocate for disabled students by monitoring the academic and environmental conditions affecting students and by recommending the necessary accommodations. DSS works closely with faculty and others in the West Virginia State College Community to increase this awareness of the capabilities and needs of the disabled and to facilitate students' access to and participation in college programs.

Students return from model UN conference inspired

by Chuck Smith, news editor

Enthusiastic State College students returned from a model United Nations conference at Jackson's Mill, W. Va., with a desire to start an international affairs club on campus. Ten students represented State at the two-day meeting sponsored by West Virginia University, Nov. 15-16.

Students from seven colleges around the state were formed into delegations representing various countries at two model Security Councils. Four issues were brought before the councils: international drug traffic, the Green Peace affair, terrorism, and Central America.

Ten students from State made up four of the delegations. State students who attended the conference were primarily from the International Relations class. The students represented the U.S.S.R., China and Madagascar in one of the Security Councils, and the United States in the other.

"It was difficult to step out of an American state of mind to represent the views of another country," said Mark Kelly, junior, of Cross Lanes.

"It made us realize how difficult it must really be to negotiate on the international level," said Caroline De Van, sophomore, from Charleston.

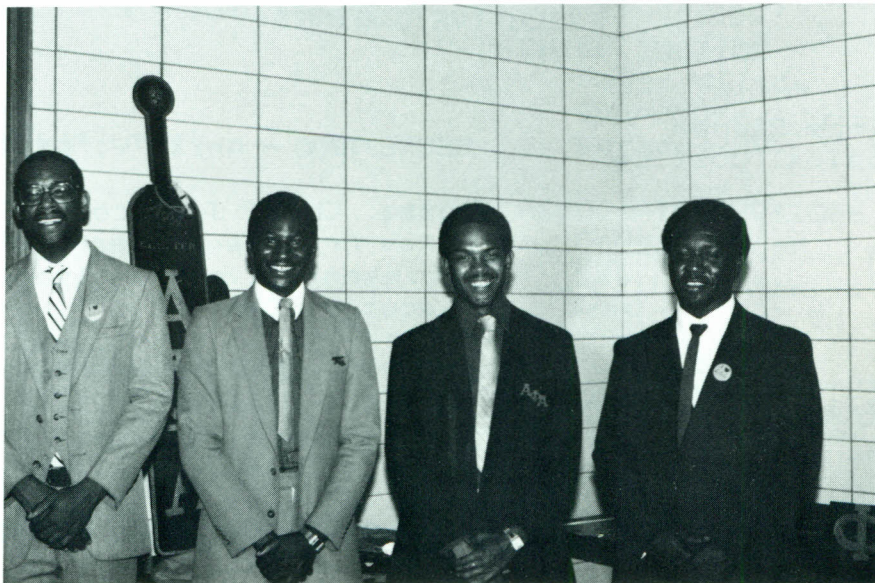

The Student Government Association provided funds for the trip. Dr. Gerry Beller, assistant professor of political science, served as advisor to the group.

"The students expressed a good deal of enthusiasm, prepared well, and did a good job," Beller said.

"I felt we were pretty well prepared," said Robert Stephens, senior, Woodbridge, Va.

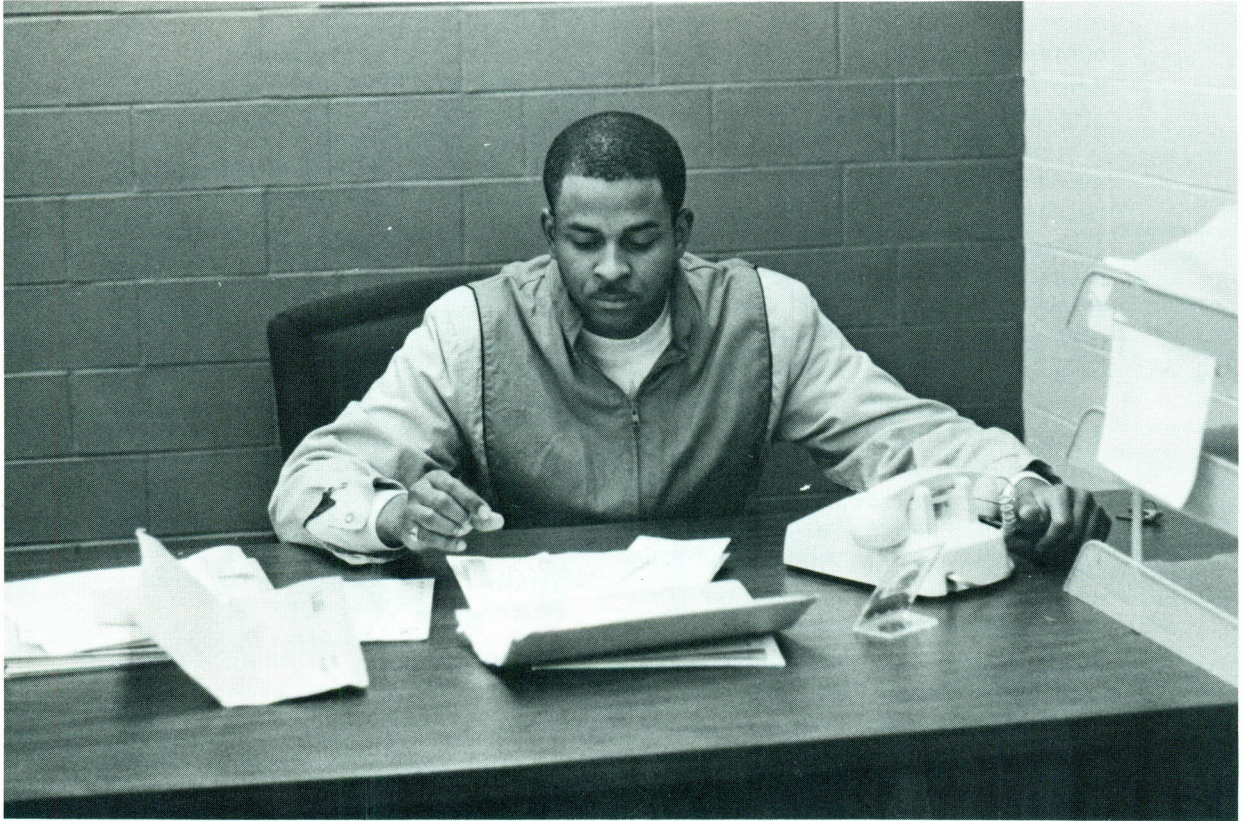

"Our biggest problem was we didn't know what to expect. We did well after the first hour."

Sculpture Symbolizes WVSC's Integrated Past

Dr. Cubert Smith

"La Visto" Commemorates Three Decades Of Integration

West Virginia State College has celebrated over 30 years of integration, and the intent of Dr. Cubert Smith's sculpture is to symbolize that milestone.

Appropriately, Smith was a member of that first integrated class. Now a faculty member at his alma mater, he first conceived the idea for the 12-ton concrete and aluminum piece while on a sabbatical about three years ago.

"The name is 'La Vista'" he said. That's Spanish, or French, for "The Vision."

"There's a need for vision, for dreams in the midst of everything. Art can't be all negative. We have to give a certain amount of hope."

His piece has three 22-foot high parts, each with a concrete base with three steps and a four-foot aluminum circular disk at the top.

"Everything is in threes," Smith explained. "Each step is a decade."

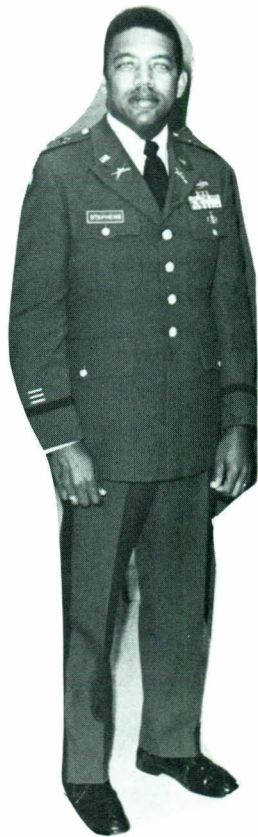

But the parts, particularly the disks at the top, symbolize more than just three decades of racial integration, he said.

"I think we've moved beyond that," Smith said. Society is also moving toward complete integration of women and the elderly, he said, adding, "We still have a bit yet to do."

That continued developing of both individuals and society is symbolized by the incomplete aluminum disks on the sculpture. In each, about two-thirds of the circle is complete, with the remaining one-third slightly offset - as if they are in the process of being completed.

The Marshall Award is one of the nation's most prestigious awards for ROTC excellence.

While attending West Virginia State College, Howley received the Association of the U.S. Army Award and earned the Airborne and Airborne Assault Qualification badges.

He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Army Corps of Engineers.

Blood drive syphens 99 pints

by Teresa Morris, copy editor

They were dressed as a vampire, the hunchback of Notre Dame, and a Crayola crayon, and they took blood from anyone who volunteered a vein.

The Red Cross, aided by ROTC and State student volunteers, sponsored its bi-annual blood drive Oct. 31 at Wilson Student Union Main Lounge.

Barbara Vannoy, a Red Cross representative, stated that 99 pints were donated, which is about average for West Virginia State College.

However, she noted that in a school this size, 150 to 200 pints should be expected. Of the 99 pints donated, 52 were from the ROTC.

Linda Lee Stahlman, college librarian, completed her second gallon of blood donated. She said she decided to give blood years ago when she was too young to donate to a cousin in need of a transfusion.

Organizers of the blood drive, Sgt 1st Class Otis Pittman and Cadet Capt. Delois Patterson, said they were hopeful for a large turnout, but that the fear of contracting AIDS was deterring people.

"If it hadn't been for this school I would have never gotten an education. This is my school. I know that sounds corny to say but that's what it is. I feel obligated to this school."

Bailey, who was reared in Spencer and now lives in Cross Lanes was an all-conference first baseman here in 1966, the same year that he signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates organization as a pitcher. His professional baseball career continued until 1972, when he returned to West Virginia State to earn a master's degree in Education Administration.

In his first season as the Yellow Jackets' head baseball coach, in 1978, Bailey was named the West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletics Conference Coach of the Year, and the following season he was College Coach of the Year in West Virginia. He also was chosen WVIAC Coach of the Year in 1979, 1981, 1982 and 1983.

SEVEN FACULTY/STAFF MEMBERS RETIRE

Dr. Virginia B. Edwards, Dr. Ida F. Kramer, and Mrs. Della Brown Taylor.

Dr. Edwards joined the faculty in 1965 as an assistant professor of English. During the last 12 years, she has been chairwoman of the English Department and has been a professor of English since 1978. She received her bachelor's degree from State, a master's degree from Ohio State University and a Ph.D. in English from the University of Pittsburgh. She also studied at Columbia University.

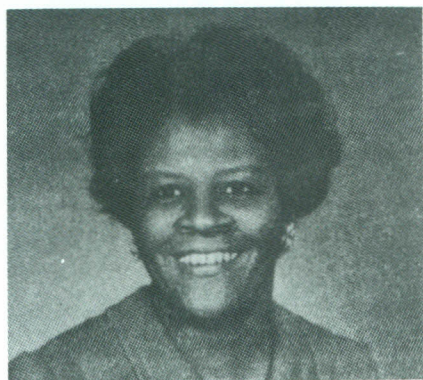

Dr. Kramer served with the United States State Department before joining the faculty of West Virginia State. She obtained bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Minnesota. She is a professor of history. In her tenure at State, she was instrumental in helping students obtain graduate fellowships and assistantships.

The college art gallery was named for Mrs. Taylor in 1984. She has degrees from State and from Boston University. Mrs. Taylor was chairwoman of the Art Department for 16 years and was named Alumna of the Year in 1969. She is currently chairwoman of State's Pride and Preservation Committee and is a doctoral student at Kent State University.

JAMES DUCKWYLER

On August 31, Mr. James Duckwyler retired from the custodial services of West Virginia State College after more than 38 years of service. During all that time, he was a favorite person with students and staff of the College. He was always helpful with words of encouragement to many students who were having difficulties at the College. Further, he willingly worked many extra hours without complaint when he felt that the students needed him. All of the students of West Virginia State College who were fortunate enough to know Mr. Duckwyler will remember him fondly for many years to come. We wish him all of the good things that he so rightly deserves during his years of retirement.

FREDA BURKETT

Freda Burkett, Director of Financial Aid, retired on August 31, 1985. She had been with the College for 39 years, 19 of which she served as director. Her immediate plans were to rest and travel, with community and hospital volunteer work to keep involved with service. She stated that she enjoyed working in the Financial Aid Office and helping students reach their goals. Her fondest memories were watching students march across the commencement stage, who would not have been able to had it not been for financial aid assistance, and see the many students who came back to thank her for her efforts. Mrs. Burkett was the first black female financial aid officer in the State of West Virginia.

By Maureen Crockett
FOR METRO WEST

"This is a three hankie affair," said the guest of honor, Dr. Ancella R. Bickley, retiring as West Virginia State College's vice president for academic affairs.

Having brought only one hankie, Bickley depended on family and friends, 137 of whom had gathered May 8 for a luncheon at WVSC's student union.

"Portrait of a Lady" was the appropriate title for the celebration, which included friends, community and religious leaders, students, family, government dignitaries, faculty, emeritus faculty, and administrators from several colleges.

Over the years, Bickley served WVSC as instructor, associate professor of English, Title III grant coordinator, vice president for administration, and finally, as vice president for academic affairs.

"I have always missed teaching," she said. "The pace changes as an administrator. You are locked to a desk all day. Faculty have time to prepare classes, study, and read."

Helping students to learn has been important to her. A student at the luncheon mentioned that Bickley also helped people get loans so they could stay on at State. When there were no loans, the student added, the necessary money came from Bickley.

College administration is a harder job than teaching because good and just decisions can still cause unpleasant reactions. Add being black and female to the situation. The job description then requires exorbitant amounts of patience, understanding, and grit. Bickley was sensitive to the different ways blacks and whites, men and women, related to each other at work. She had to be aware of traditional behavior for black women and not fall into traps. She learned where to sit at a table and not to do automatically all the nurturing behaviors, but it was hard.

For example, "It is easier for me to sit at a typewriter and bat out my own ideas than to dictate," she explained.

What helped her through the tough times? The warm support of her husband, attorney Nelson Bickley, and an informal support group of women at the college. "Thank God for them! They helped me survive."

Bickley said another aid was a tradition at WVSC of women in unusual roles. Dr. Angie King had chaired the Chemistry Department, and Dr. Barbara Oden ran the Biology Department. "Women who had gone before acted as mentors for the young ones."

Unfortunately, she has noticed some regression over the years. "As a black person today, I am alarmed at the shrinking number of blacks, both students and faculty, in higher education. The people who are going to run the world will be the readers, the college educated."

Bickley's tenure made a difference at State. She worked hard to raise faculty standards, helped get the faculty senate and the community college started, and now is taking early retirement. "My children are grown, I am in good health; now I can plumb my own depths before my brain atrophies."

Just for fun, she plans to write some Harlequin-type romances for a black audience. "My daughters and their college roommates will be my editorial board."

Bickley's serious, long term goal is to search out black history in West Virginia, look for unpublished black literature, and then write and publish her findings.

She has long had an interest in women's rights also. "I think there were heroic black women here. I want to poke around in old West Virginia newspapers and trunks in people's attics." She will look for history, and get oral history from the old ones.

"My grandfather was a slave in Virginia who settled here after the Civil War. He came across the mountains, following the railroad, looking for work." He chose Huntington as a good place to raise his family; Bickley now wants to discover how her people's history relates to Huntington's as the years passed.

To ease herself back into a regime of study, research, and scholarship, Bickley will spend the summer at the University of California at Berkeley taking a seminar on race and slavery as seen in American literature.

"My first year will be a studying phase. I may teach black literature at Parkersburg, where the first black school was."

Looking around the crowded room, Bickley saw many friends from her days as a student at WVSC, Marshall University, and West Virginia University. There were young students and emeritus faculty. "Some of the happiest moments of my life were spent at this college," she said.

She came to the campus for the first time as a freshman from Huntington, arriving on the train to a packed college. "The campus teemed with trailers and quonset huts. Each dorm room held five students."

At the retirement luncheon, West Virginia first lady Shelley Moore, presented Bickley with the Distinguished West Virginian Award. She earned the award in non-academic ways also. Dr.

Charles Daugherty spoke of Bickley's passion for justice and human rights. Dr. Thomas Cole, president of WVSC and acting chancellor of the state board of regents, noted, "She is the first alumnus and the first woman to be our chief academic officer."

MRS. GLADYS WALKER

Mrs. Walker was employed from July 1, 1967 until December 31, 1985. She worked in the Chemistry Department and retired as Chemistry Equipment Attendant.

MRS. ELNORA THOMPSON

Mrs. Thompson was employed from October 5, 1955 till July 1, 1985. She is a WVSC Graduate who received her Associate Degree in Education on May 15, 1975. She received her BOR-BA Degree on May 17, 1976. Mrs. Thomas was a clerk in the Registrar's Office and also worked in Fiscal Affairs. She retired as the Coordinator of Purchasing/Accounts Payable.

GRADUATE DINNER

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1985

The Graduate Dinner is hosted by the president in tribute to those students who are completing their courses of study at the College and who will, upon graduation, join the ranks of its distinguished alumni. The dinner is a way of saying congratulations and good luck as students go forth as graduates of the institution and as practicing professionals—indeed as "West Virginia State College in Action." Among the honored guests at the dinner are the commencement marshals. As faculty members who are graduates of the institution, they "escort" the commencement procession and, in so doing, help to induct the new graduates into the customs and traditions of the College.

D. Wayne Smith Mid-Year Commencement Speaker

D. Wayne Smith, president of the Friendship Force, was the speaker for mid-year Commencement in December.

In his address, Mr. Smith spoke of his early days at WVSC which were in the first year of desegregation.

He reminisced that one of his professors made a statement he still remembers: "The only thing worse than an ignorant person is a person who is ignorant and doesn't know it."

Mr. Smith added, "My education was helped along in part because the College took a problem (desegregation), found in it a possibility, and offered a promise."

□□□ T, he urged students to continue to strive to achieve the promise of freedom and dignity for all citizens.

He is a 1957 summa cum laude graduate of West Virginia State College. He received a bachelor of divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary and formerly pastored Elk Hills Presbyterian Church in Charleston.

In 1976, Mr. Smith proposed to President Carter a worldwide citizens exchange program to be known as the Friendship Force, and Carter named him to head the organization.

The Friendship Force is a non-governmental, non-profit organization which takes Americans to various nations and brings citizens of other countries to the U.S. The purpose is to foster a people-to-people relationship while the travelers are guests in private homes in the host country.

In 1973, he assisted with arrangements for President Carter's Brazilian trip and served as interpreter and guide while in Brazil as a missionary.

While serving as Minister to the Community of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, Mr. Smith found METANOIA, a religious social service center for teenage runaways, offenders, and high school dropouts.

He later served as vice president of personnel, promotions, and marketing for Omni, Atlanta's 17,000-seat coliseum; interim pastor of Newman Presbyterian Church, and chaplain of the Atlanta Hawks basketball team.

McGee Urges WVSC Graduates To Put Forth 'That Extra Effort'

By MONICA OROSZ
Of The Daily Mail Staff

Going for "the little extra bit of chocolate" in life can make the difference in being ordinary and being something special, the president and publisher of the Daily Mail was to tell 295 graduating seniors of West Virginia State College today.

McGEE

"When your spirit came into being on the planet Earth, there was only one chance in 100 that you would be an American college graduate," said John McGee in an advance text of his commencement address.

"You are way ahead of the pack. That is a burden, that is a responsibility, that is a challenge, that is an exciting opportunity, and that is a mind-boggling, demanding, lovely opportunity," he said.

West Virginia State's 91st commencement began at 10 a.m. at Ferrell Hall at the Institute campus.

McGee was to tell the graduating seniors that they should use their already favorable circumstances to help make civilization better.

To illustrate his point, McGee relates a story of a young boy and chocolate candy:

late candy:

The boy waits all week for his allowance, planning to spend the money he earned doing chores on a little chocolate candy boy at the candy store. On Saturday morning, the little boy rushes down to the store and asks the waitress for the candy. Not thinking, she reaches into the store window and picks up a little candy girl instead.

The boy tells her he wants the candy boy, not the candy girl. The waitress tells him there isn't much difference, but the little boy tells her there is a little more chocolate in the candy boy.

"In most instances, it can be that little extra bit of chocolate that will make the difference between you and those that are around and about you," the text of the speech reads.

The little extra bit helped Ferdinand to win the Kentucky Derby, McGee says.

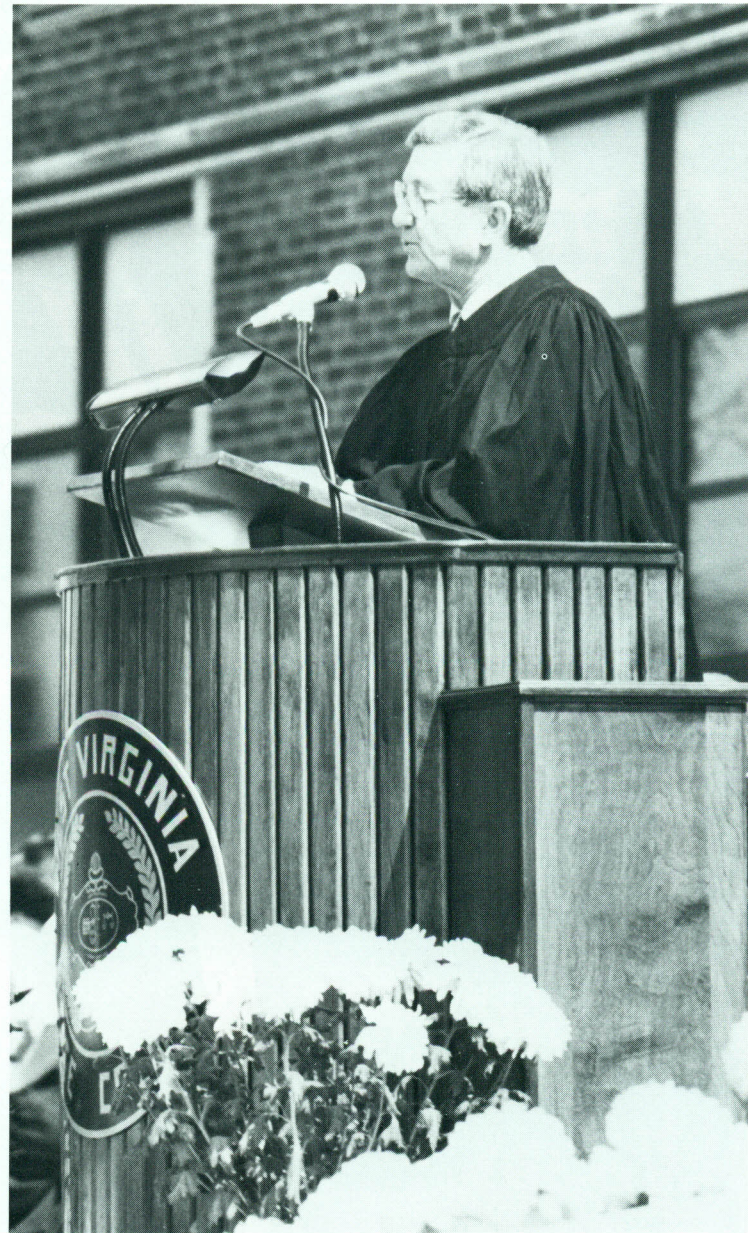

"... It is that little extra effort that tips the scale so often. It is what makes a person a leader. It is what gives the artist the flair. It is what gives certain ministers great command of the word that can hold you spellbound. It is what made Ernest Hemingway the magnificent writer he was."

McGee holds a bachelor's degree in business and political science from Davidson College. He joined the Daily Mail after working for newspapers in South Carolina and Florida. He is also president of Clay Communications Inc.

McGee is past director of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association and a member of the advisory board of the West Virginia School of Journalism. He is currently a member of the executive committee of the Associated Press and is past president of the West Virginia Press Association.

Chancellor Ginsberg quits under pressure

Cole, WVSC president, BOR chancellor: double dynamite

President Thomas Cole, is the new "Dynamic duo" of West Virginia State College, since he assumed the position of acting chancellor of the Board of Regents.

Cole says dual roles not hurting WVSC

Cole addressed the college's faculty and staff Monday, February 10, regarding his new appointment.

"While carrying out your appointment as acting chancellor, will you continue as an active president of West Virginia State College?"

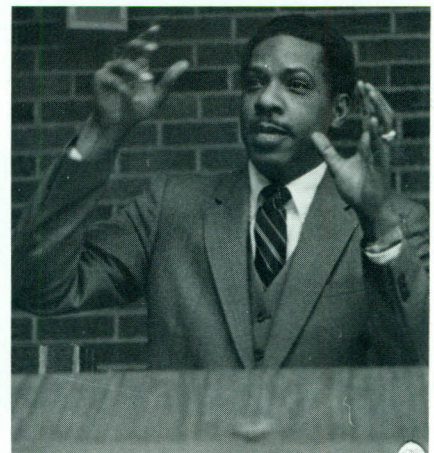

"Yes." As you know last Tuesday, Feb. 4th, following the resignation of Dr. Ginsberg, I was asked to serve as acting chancellor with the BOR, until such time as a new chancellor is found.

"I thought I would take this time to share with you what I sense is the impact of my new duties with the BOR, without benefit of rumor or speculation..."

Did you have any misgivings initially about accepting the position?"

"The timing couldn't have been worse, I thought. The college is in the early stages of organizing a fund raising effort and public relations strategy. We are finalizing plans for implementing the first stages of the Master Plan, as well as the fine tuning the academic organization, and revising the general education curriculum."

"If you spend only two days a week on the campus of West Virginia State College while acting Chancellor of the Board of Regents, will you be visible at the college?"

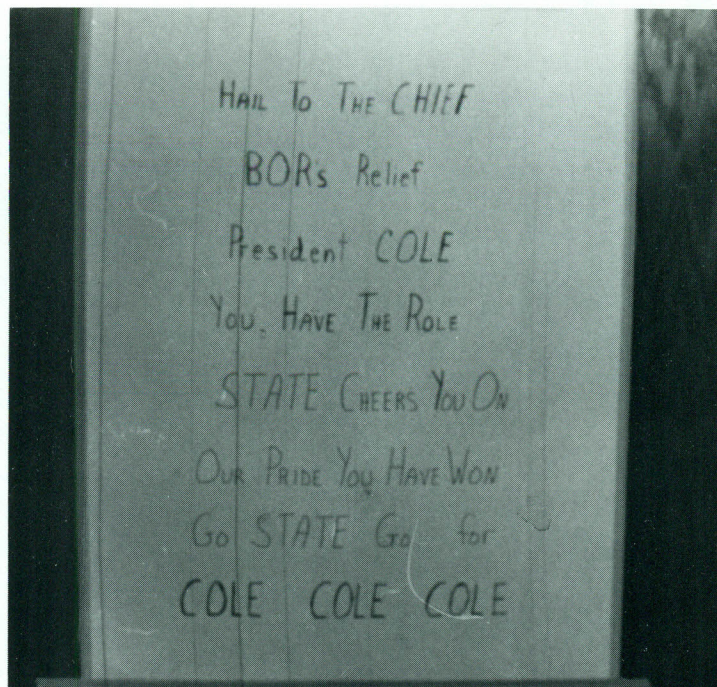

"I will still be very visible at the college, and dual roles will not hurt the college."

"Fortunately there is good leadership and support here at State."

"During this period, I have delegated the responsibility of the day to day running of the college to the vice-presidents, with whom I will be in daily contact."

"However, because I live in Institute I also stop by this office every day-or almost every day-the first thing in the morning, and the last thing in the evening."

...AND ONE FUNCTION THE PRESIDENT WILL NOT DELEGATE IS ACKNOWLEDGING A GENEROUS GIFT TO THE COLLEGE.

BUSY AND BENEVOLENT Grazia Ferrell

When one enters the world of Grazia Ferrell, one needs to be prepared to RUN--not walk!!

Whether growing African violets for hospital patients, tending a rose garden, or working with mental health projects, Mrs. Ferrell is an extremely active lady.

One of her latest projects involves establishing a scholarship fund in the name of her late husband, Dr. Harrison H. Ferrell, Dean of West Virginia State College for 29 years, who died in 1977.

ESTABLISHES SCHOLARSHIP--Grazia Ferrell, right, presents a check to Dr. Thomas W. Cole, Jr., President of the College, to establish a scholarship in honor of her husband, the late Dr. Harrison H. Ferrell who was Academic Dean of the College for several years. His portrait is shown in the background and hangs in the foyer of Ferrell Hall, also known as the Administration Building.

"We are extremely gratified with Mrs. Ferrell's generosity in memory of her husband who was such an integral part of West Virginia State College for many years. This is a very appropriate way to revere his memory. I would hope that others would emulate her benevolence to the College so that we may offer educational opportunities to students who may otherwise not have the chance for a college education. We deeply appreciate Mrs. Ferrell and her gift," Dr. Cole said.
